

HER MOTHER'S SECRET.

CHAPTER I.

THE MISTRESS OF MONDREER.
There is a sound within her heart—a sound that has been growing louder and louder, and may a while, when all that is around her seems to smile, within her heart of hearts she will smile.

ISAAC WILLIAMS.

"Mother! Oh, mother! it will break at the lady's foot, and dropping her head into her hands, down toward the carpet.

The lady gently raised her child, took her in her arms, and tenderly caressed her, murmuring softly:

"No, my own hearts never break, or one heart, I know, must have broken long ago. Besides," she added, in a firmer tone, "honor must be saved, though hearts are sacrificed."

"Honor, mother dear? I do not understand. If it has, I should think that honor would be better saved by my keeping faith with Le than by breaking with him! Oh, mother! mother! It will kill me!" moaned Odalite.

"My child, my darling child, my little Odalite, come to me!—Forces no claim to be remembered by you. You have never been engaged to him. You were but a little girl of thirteen when he went to sea on his first voyage three years ago, and you have not seen him since. What possible claim can he have upon you, since no betrothal exists between you?" gently questioned the lady, tenderly running her fair fingers through the dark tresses of the young head that leaned upon her bosom.

"Oh, mother," replied the girl, with a heavy sigh, "I know that there was no formal betrothal between Le and myself—but—but—we all knew, you and father and Le and I—all knew, and always knew, that we two belonged to each other and would always belong to each other all our lives. Le and I never thought of any other fate."

"Idle, childish fancies, my poor little girl too trivial to cause you these tears. Wipe them away, and look clearly at the higher destiny meant for you. Your love for Le, your mother, the lady, are strong; but you are now a woman, and your heart is full of love for Le."

"A few LADIES to make up goods for the holliday, were given at home. 265 4th av., Second floor."
